The editorial team wishes to express gratitude to those who have made this book project a reality. Different stakeholders who collaborated in this noble work ought to be mentioned. Our deep and sincere appreciation goes to the 2018 AATA leadership for their initiative to have this project carried out. This is the Association's first book publication. Thank you for pioneering this move. We would be remiss to exclude all AATA's leadership in the past upon whose legacies create a momentum for such breakthroughs. Thank you.

Great appreciation to the essay authors who have been willing to expose and share their insights and set the stage for academic and professional discussion. Great job. The Journal of AIIAS African Theological Association (JAATA) peer-reviewers, for ensuring that each essay does not escape high and strict academic scrutiny. We thank you. The AIIAS administration, through the Public Relations office, for their technical assistance and valuable suggestions in the initial discussions and throughout our work together. We offer our thanks as well to the people who offered to contribute their tributes to Dr. Stephen Guptill, AIIAS President, for whom this book has been written in honor.

We are greatly grateful to Advent Press, Ghana, and their CEO Pastor Kingsley Osei, who have graciously provided us with an excellent opportunity to get this book printed. It must be noted that they have done it in record time. Thank you. Those who prayed and wished this project come to pass are numerous as the stars shown to Abraham by God, you are exceptional, and great people, thank you.

Finally, and most importantly, we give our heartfelt gratitude to the Great I AM, our Lord, our God, for His grace to have this book produced. Health and Wholeness when practiced and experienced by His children, glorifies the Creator of all things, and in the context of this book, the human machine. To Him be all the praise. God's amazing gift of life and His grace has brought us this far.
